Alexi Musnitsky's Debut Album A startling first effort from a young pianist

When you are just 19 years old and Grammy-winning producer Will Ackerman asks if you want to come to the legendary Imaginary Road Studios to record your first album, it's a solid indication that your talent is both abundant and unique. One listen to pianist Alexi Musnitsky's debut recording, Zia, and you and your listeners will hear why Ackerman sought him out. Uncommon warmth and sensitivity melded with technique flowing with grace and restraint are the traits which Musnitsky brings to every one of the album's seven tracks. Joined on several songs by esteemed performers Eugene Friesen (cello), Tom Eaton (bass and percussion), Noah Wilding (vocals), and Ackerman himself on Hopi drum, Alexi Musnitsky will enchant fans of contemporary piano music who will eagerly await more in the future from this talented newcomer.

The critics weigh in on Zia

The music of Zia will touch your soul and warm your heart. Let your ears listen and your spirit unfold, the music will lead the way. It most certainly worked that way for me while taking this in.

Keith "MuzikMan" Hannaleck - New Age Music Reviews

Eloquently restrained and never bombastic in its approach, Zia offers an impressive level of musical maturity and depth for this young talent. Demonstrating a piano playing style that is fluid and supple, Zia is not to be missed by those who particularly enjoy elegant piano music wrapped in wholesome beauty.
